

Sutton Hoo

Sutton Hoo is the site of the grave of an Anglo-Saxon king in Suffolk, England. It is very important to historians because it tells them a great deal about the wealth and traditions of early Anglo-Saxon kings.

On the site, archaeologists discovered that a huge wooden ship had been buried there in the AD 600s. The wood had rotted away, but it had left an impression in the soil showing the shape of the ship. Ship burials were common with people from northern Europe. A hut had been built in the middle of the ship. Inside it was a coffin and many priceless treasures. The Anglo-Saxons believed that this was the best way for a powerful person to reach the afterlife when he had died.

The treasures found by archaeologists inside the ship included armour, weapons, inlaid ornaments, jewellery, silver and gold tableware, musical instruments, and gold coins. The coins, from the AD 620s, helped to date the burial.

What did Anglo-Saxons believe?

In Roman Britain many people had been Christians. But the early Anglo-Saxons were not Christians, they were pagans. After the Romans left, Christianity continued in places where Anglo-Saxons did not settle. When the Anglo-Saxons came to Britain they brought their own gods and beliefs with them.

In AD597 the Pope in Rome decided it was time the Anglo-Saxons in Britain heard about Christianity. He sent a monk called Augustine to persuade the king to become a Christian. Over the next 100 years, many Anglo-Saxons turned to Christianity and new churches and monasteries were built.

Monasteries were centres of learning. Monks and nuns spent their time in prayer. They also studied and worked in fields and workshops. Monks copied out books by hand and decorated the pages in beautiful colours. Monasteries were the only schools in Anglo-Saxon England. Boys went to live there to train as monks and some girls became nuns.

When was the Anglo-Saxon era?

It is believed that the Anglo-Saxon era began around 450 AD. They ruled for approximately 500 years.

Who were the Anglo-Saxons?

After the Romans left Britain, it became more open to invasion.

The Anglo-Saxons were made up of three groups of people from Germany, Denmark and The Netherlands.

The groups were named the Angles, the Saxons, and the Jutes. The Angles and the Saxon tribes were the largest of the three attacking tribes and so we often know them as Anglo-Saxons. They all shared the same language but were each ruled by different strong warriors.

Where did they settle?

Anglo-Saxon Britain wasn't ruled by one person and the Anglo-Saxons were not united. They invaded as many different tribes and each took over different parts of Britain and created settlements.

Each group of Anglo-Saxon settlers had a leader or war-chief. A strong and successful leader became 'cyning', the Anglo-Saxon word for 'king'. Each king ruled a kingdom and led a small army.

By around 600 AD, after much fighting, there were five important Anglo-Saxon kingdoms. They were Northumbria, Mercia, Wessex, Kent and East Anglia. Sometimes they got along, sometimes they went to war.

This is what a typical Anglo Saxon home would have looked like.
